

ABSTRACT

An organic electroluminescent device of the present invention includes a substrate, an anode, an organic layer
5 having a light emitting layer, and a cathode capable of transmitting light. The cathode has an electron injection layer of calcium and a protective layer of silver. The protective layer covers the surface of the electron injection layer.